

Cyclamens in the snow?

No no.

This is one of the previous pictures, with some computerized snow-blurring effect.

The original picture in page 11 is a photograph of pink-violet cyclamens in nature, dozens kilometers far away from Haifa.

Only he who has 4X4 drive car, and know where and when, can get there.

You do not have to - you can walk few steps from a building in Haifa, and see groups of hundreds natural cyclamens blooming together during the season. YET.

But - not after they will build on the area.

You also can STILL easily make similar unlimited number of photographs in nature, between hundreds evergreen casuarina trees in Haifa, even every day during the two months blossom season, until you find how to get the desirable effect.

Come with your family and photograph them between thousands cyclamens, if you like to.

But - not after they will build on the area.
